New Yale-Commonwealth Fund Fellowship to Train Leaders in Minority Health

With financial support from the Commonwealth Fund, the Yale School of Management will launch a fellowship program to give healthcare practitioners the leadership skills and the deep understanding of markets, organizations, and governments needed to tackle major inequities in the U.S. healthcare system.

The fellowship program will give healthcare leaders, currently at the director or vice president level, the opportunity to take a year away from their current roles for an immersive, hands-on learning experience. The fellows will work with the fund to address major health inequities and will have the chance to lead projects that address these issues.

The fellowship is named in honor of Yale SOM’s founding dean, William H. Donaldson. Every two years, Yale SOM solicits nominations for the Donaldson Fellows program, which recognizes alumni who embody the school’s mission to educate leaders for business and society.

The fellowship program is open to residents of the 50 U.S. states, the District of Columbia, and Puerto Rico. Applications will be accepted through December 1, 2018.

For more information about the fellowship and to apply, please visit the Yale SOM Alumni portal or contact the Fellowship Program at fellowship@yale.edu.

Tenure Leading PepsiCo

‘Compelling and Consequential’

Indra Nooyi ‘80 Completes Tenure Leading PepsiCo

This fall, Indra Nooyi ‘80, a longtime advisor, supporter, and champion of Yale SOM, will step down as CEO of PepsiCo after 12 years of leading the global food and beverage company.

Nooyi has been known for her focus on the company’s chairman.

A few months later, she will step down as the company’s chairman.

A successful career change is challenging because hiring systems and new recruiting technology is biased toward candidates with a “traditional” or expected background. In this one hour presentation, Dawn presents many practical techniques from her book "Beyond B-School: MBA Switchers: How Smart Professionals Map a Career Change". Whether you are considering a career change yourself or are advising someone who is, this program will help you learn the right questions to ask and the best strategies to pursue.
